My Weather Adventure

One day, when I was a little kid, I visited a town in this country. While the days were hot and windy—ideal for tornadoes—the nights were cold and rainy, ideal for rainstorms. With these weather conditions, a natural event was very likely.

On the fourth night in this town, after 7 p.m., thunder and lightning announced a strong storm. There were flashes, cracks in the sky, strong winds, and heavy rain—more and more rain. The people from the town were prepared with supplies and an emergency plan because they had experience with this type of event.

I was surprised and scared, but the plan was safe and appropriate. I still remember this extreme weather event with respect.
