CRAZY STORY

by Mr. Michael Canon

Once upon a time, there was a beautiful princess who lived in an old shack located on a high mountain called the “happy green” because of the amount of green trees and bushes that were there. The princess had everything in her shack. She had all kind of domestic and wild animals but her favorite ones were the foal, the otter, the pink cow and the brown toad. One day she went to the forest and took all the animals with her. They loved to play hide and seek and count to 15 while the animals hid in the trees, bushes, behind the rocks or even in the caves they had built under the ground. Unfortunately, while they were playing, the cricket and the foal fell off a tree and broke their legs. They shouted very hard asking for help but unfortunately the princess and the other animals were very far away from them and could not hear them.

Then the cricket got an idea, she remembered she could fly, so she flew out the hole and brought a hungry long snake and asked her to use his long body to take the small foal out of the hole. The snake was a very nice reptile and did what the cricket ordered her and took the foal out of the hole using its long tongue. The foal was very happy and gave five candies to the snake. When the princess and the animals arrived, they could not believe the story because it sounded very crazy to them. They said: a big snake helped you and did not eat you. Anyway, it was not easy to believe a hungry snake used her tongue to help the foal, but you know what they say: a friend in need is a friend in deed.
